Answer Key for Class 6 English Question Paper: Who Did Patrick's Homework?

---

Descriptive Questions (6 marks each)

1. Describe the character of Patrick and his attitude towards homework at the beginning of the story.

Patrick is portrayed as a playful and carefree boy who finds homework boring and uninteresting. He prefers to engage in sports like hockey and basketball and plays video games instead of studying. His attitude towards homework is dismissive; he often thinks of it as a tedious task that he would rather avoid. His teachers try to encourage him to do his homework, emphasizing its importance for learning, but Patrick feels frustrated and considers himself an ignoramus due to his lack of interest and effort in his schoolwork.

2. What incident led Patrick to meet the little man? Describe the moment he found him.

One day, while Patrick was at home, he found his cat playing with what he thought was a doll. However, upon grabbing it away from the cat, he was surprised to discover that it was not a doll but a tiny man-an elf. The little man was wearing a wool shirt and britches and had a hat resembling that of a witch. The moment was filled with tension as the tiny man begged Patrick to save him from the cat, promising to grant Patrick a wish in return.

3. How did Patrick's life change after the little man agreed to help with his homework? Give specific examples.

After the little man agreed to help Patrick with his homework, Patrick initially thought he would get off easy. However, he realized that he had to assist the little man with his homework as he struggled with various subjects. Consequently, Patrick's life changed as he became more engaged in learning. He spent hours with the little man, studying and completing assignments, which ultimately led him to improve his academic performance and develop a responsible attitude toward his studies.

4. Discuss the subjects in which the little man required help while doing Patrick's homework.

The little man needed help primarily in subjects where he lacked knowledge and understanding. These subjects included mathematics, science, and English. He found himself struggling with numerous assignments that required Patrick's direct assistance, showcasing the theme of mutual support in the pursuit of education.

5. Explain how Patrick felt during the homework sessions with the little man. What did he learn from this experience?

Patrick felt a mix of emotions during the homework sessions. Initially, he was content that he had a helper for his homework, but as it progressed, he became aware of the hard work involved in learning. He experienced the challenges of various subjects that he previously neglected. From this experience, Patrick learned the value of education, hard work, and responsibility, ultimately changing his attitude toward homework.

6. In your opinion, who did the homework in the end - Patrick or the little man? Provide justification for your answer.

In the end, it was Patrick who did the homework. Though he initially believed that the little man accomplished the tasks, the story reveals that Patrick worked alongside him and ultimately took responsibility for his studies. The transformation in Patrick's character, from a boy who avoided homework to a model student, indicates that he was the one who learned and applied himself, highlighting the importance of self-effort in education.
